

Compelling any jurisdiction to downgrade their Do Not Call list to a lesser Federal standard is ill-advised, especially in the light of other areas of legislative restrictions, e.g. firearms, are allowed to be made more stringent than applicable Federal laws.

Telephone customers have the same right to the protection of more stringent local legislation as those who favor stricter firearms laws for their community than the US Congress has seen fit to provide for them on the Federal level.